On January 25, 1996, the Committee on Youth Development of the Board on Children, Youth, and Families convened a workshop to examine the implications of research on social settings for the design and evaluation of programs that serve youth. The January workshop provided an opportunity for the committee to examine the strengths and limitations of existing research on interactions between social settings and adolescent development. This research has drawn attention to the importance of understanding how, when, and where adolescents interact with their families, peers, and unrelated adults in settings such as home, school, places of work, and recreational sites. This workshop builds on previous work of the National Research Council and reiterates its support for integrating studies of social settings into more traditional research on individual characteristics, family functioning, and peer relationships in seeking to describe and explain adolescent behavior and youth outcomes. Not only does this report examine the strengths and limitations of research on social settings and adolescence and identify important research questions that deserve further study in developing this field, but it also explores alternative methods by which the findings of research on social settings could be most contributions to this volume originated as papers given at an international conference on integrative perspectives on youth development held in berlin west in may 1983 this conference was part of a 6 year longitudinal research program on the causes of substance use among adolescents in berlin which is now in its fourth year the conference title deliberately did not refer to substance use however its relevance to an explanation of drug related problem behavior was made evident to everyone invited to the conference the search for integrative perspectives in youth development originated in a dilemma that became obvious during the planning of intensive research on concomitants of substance use in the methodology for research on youth development there were two lines of thought that seemed completely unrelated to each other one line of thought was oriented toward the person leaving situational aspects aside while the other concentrated on ecological or situational determinants and thus neglected the aspects of development and internal processes the integration of both these directions seemed to be an unusually promising approach for any project that aimed to understand changes in the individual within a rapidly changing urban setting the best way to come closer to a resolution of that dilemma seemed to be an intensive exchange between the american and european scientific communities on this issue moving the youth development message turning a vague idea into a moral imperative peter l benson and karen pittman the contagion of an idea in the past fifteen years countless programs agencies funding initiatives professionals and volunteers have embraced the term youth development linked more by shared passion than by formal membership or credentials these people and places have contributed to a wave of energy and activity not unlike that of a social movement with a multitude of people on the ground connecting to a set of ideas that give sustenance support and value to increasingly innovative efforts to build competent successful and healthy youth there are several particularly interesting dimensions to this movement first the youth development idea has the potential to draw people and organizations together across many sectors conferences and initiatives using youth development language attract increasingly eclectic audiences bringing together national youth organizations schools city county and state agencies police and juvenile justice workers clergy and committed citizens perhaps embedded in the youth development idea is a philosophy or a way that has created an intellectual and or spiritual home for actors across many settings however this happens it is clear that one of the powerful social consequences of the youth development idea is a connecting of the dots the weaving within and across city county state and of a tapestry of new relationships
